So what does mental health feel like?

For some it may feel like...

For some people mental health might mean that they experience lots of different emotions in one day.

Mental health can include feeling good and bad.

There are lots of ways that can help us deal with our mental health.

Sometimes mental health might mean someone is unsure or confused about how they are feeling.

Mental health can be difficult to talk about - and that's okay!

Mental health is something that all of us experience.

Mental health can involve our emotions; how we feel, what we think and how we behave

Sometimes if we are feeling low, or sad, we might need the help of others around us like our friends, family to make us feel better.

Mental health is not something to feel ashamed about, it's important that we keep talking about it - especially if we are feeling sad, or confused.

Some people do not need any support with their mental health. Other people may need to interact with a wellbeing service or speak to a professional to help them deal with what they are feeling.

There is no right or wrong way that someone should feel, our emotions are personal and can affect us all in different ways.

Top Tips

Keep asking questions if you don't understand the answers don't worry– even adults find it hard to understand mental health.

- Write a list of the things that are making you worried, writing things down can sometimes be easier than talking about it, and share it with your parents or a trusted adult
- Learn some techniques for when you are feeling overwhelmed such as mindfulness, or grounding techniques
- Talk to your teacher if the care you are doing is stopping you from doing your homework
- Make a list of the things you enjoy doing and see if you can do one of these each week
- Go to a place in your house that makes you feel happy, or go for a walk and be in nature to help you relax.

There are lots of different methods that can help us when we are feeling overwhelmed, try some of these techniques!
